DR. MAINZER'S MUSIC BOOK FOR THE YOUNG.

PREFACE.

THIS little Work has been prepared with a view to furnish Schools and Families with a complete set of Juvenile Compositions suitable for all circumstances. The Poetry has been written or selected with the greatest care: it treats of sacred and moral objects, and calls especially the attention of the young to the beauties of Nature.

The Music has been adapted to juvenile voices, and has almost exclusively been written for the present work, the Canons excepted; these latter, as well as the Imitations and Fugues, have been added as useful and instructive singing exercises.

DR. MAINZER'S FIFTY MELODIES FOR CHILDREN.—Adapted for the use of Schools and Families.

PREFACE.

WE cannot better explain our aim in working for the diffusion of Musical Instruction, than by presenting this little book to the Teachers of Schools. We are aware that nothing is more difficult to write than books for children. In preparing this, we had three principal points in view:—

1st. To give to our little tunes such a compass that youthful and uncultivated voices can reach the extreme notes without effort.

2nd. To present the young with poetical sentiments within the reach of their intelligence.

3rd. To make these sentiments worthy to be kept in memory, so as to be used, in many circumstances of life, as guides of conduct and means of consolation.

Children are fond of singing, and are now everywhere instructed in that art. Let us, therefore, fill their mouths and their hearts with melody of a simple and elevating kind; let us call their attention to the beauties of Nature, and thus prepare them to appreciate better the beauties of the more abstract moral world.

Let it be well understood that these tunes are written for the school, and not for the church. From the school, children may bring them home, sing them in the street, in the field, or at the fireside. Grown-up persons may thus learn from children to sing what is worthy of their voice and their memory; and may learn to forget songs of other descriptions. We have shown this little book, before its publication, to persons who have made the instruction of youth the study of their lives, and who, after the most serious examination of it, have pronounced it deserving to be found in the hands of all children; it is now, therefore, presented to them, in full confidence that it will conduce to their benefit.

May it be, then, my young friends, your guide and companion; may these little tunes now instruct and now amuse you; may they teach you obedience and piety, and fill your hearts with joy and cheerfulness. May you learn, through them, to respect your school and your home, your young friends and yourselves; and, to express all my wishes in one word, may they make you better while they make you happier.

The unanimous opinion of musical judges having pronounced the Symphonies and Accompaniments of Sir John Stevenson, originally allied to the "Irish Melodies," both technically incorrect and characteristically inappropriate, the publisher has great pleasure in announcing that Mr. M. W. BALFE has re-arranged the whole of them expressly for this edition, which is also supplied with an explanatory and historical preface (which may be had gratis). With these advantages, combined with a careful revision both of the musical notes and the poetical text, and the whole of the words being set to the music, the publisher confidently recommends his edition of "Moore's Irish Melodies" to the public, as one that may challenge competition as the most perfect extant.

* All Orders should distinctly express "Balfe's Edition."

136	The time I've lost in wooing
99	Through the last glimpse of Erin
113	Thro' grief and thro' danger
118	'Tis believed that this Harp
128	'Tis the last rose of Summer
120	Weep on, weep on
109	We may roam thro' this world
95	When he, who adores thee
105	When in death I shall calm recline
114	When daylight was yet sleeping (Air—Paddy's [resource])
116	When thro' life unblest we rove
